PATROLMAN ACCUSED AS DRUNK IS TRIED

The question of who is better able to determine whether or not a man is drunk—officials of the Boston police department or the department's own physicians—before a police trial heard today.

When Patrolman Stephen D. Sheehan of the Dudley street station failed to make his daily call from 4 a. m. to 7 a. m. and then failed to appear at roll call, the chief of police conducted an investigation. Sheehan was accused of being drunk. The police summoned a doctor who examined Sheehan and declared he was not drunk. Police officials insisted he was intoxicated and charged were brought.

GIRLS TO SHED CORSET AND DON 'SNUGGLE BAND'

Girls, get acquainted with the "snuggle band." It comes as a boon to the modern woman who has found corsets interfere with golf, tennis, motorcycling and other strenuous activities. To speak plainly, the "snuggle band" is to take the place of the corset, now in disfavor with the one-time "wearer" sex. Mrs. Bromley-Shepard, fashion authority, says the "snuggle band" has arrived to stay. She explains that "snuggle bands" are made of satin, without stays, bonks, laces or corsets. They are fitted individually and are supposed to furnish as much support as corsets and far more comfort. Mrs. Bromley-Shepard is in charge of the style show of the Home Hospital and Trades Exposition which opens in Mechanics Building Saturday. She is selecting models for the style show, which will be held Thursday afternoon and evening of next week only.

LOST STONEHAM BOY IS FOUND DROWNED

Three-Year-Old Companion Tells How His Little Playmates Stoned Him in Pool

When three-year-old George Tyles had been missing three hours in the late afternoon, and then failed to come in for supper, his distressed mother, wife of a traveling salesman, began a house to house search of the neighborhood.

George, his mother learned, had been in a pond of water and was drowned. The mother, who is a widow, said she had been told by a neighbor that the boy had been in the pond. She then went to the pond and found the boy's body. She then called the police and the fire department. The boy was found dead in the pond. The mother said she was very distressed and that she was very sad to hear of her son's death.

Unusual Reserve of Sugar in Blood Won for De Mar, Expert Says

Dr. Gordon Also Explodes Theory That the Long Grind Endangers Runners' Hearts

There is no such thing as an "athletic heart," Dr. Gordon declared today.

Sugar won the Marathon for Clarence H. De Mar.

The legs are more important than the mind in distance running.

There are the conclusions of three men doctors—Dr. Gordon, Dr. A. L. Gordon and Clifford—of the New York Hospital staff.

Two years ago they had studied the heart of a long-distance runner, making "X-ray" and "X-ray" studies of the heart and blood before and after the race.

"You see the doctor," Dr. Gordon said, "the heart is not the only organ that is important in distance running. The heart is not the only organ that is important in distance running. The heart is not the only organ that is important in distance running."

MALONE LUCKY TO GET DECISION IN BATTLE WITH RATNER

AUGIE DOES FINE WORK IN CLOSE

By JACK CONWAY

Jack Malone won his eleventh straight bout in Boston when he left hooked his way to a ten-round victory over the able Augie Ratner at the Faneuil Club's show at the Boston Arena.

Many of the fans, however, figured that Ratner's smashing inside work entitled him to the decision. Augie came as Malone the toughest battle he has had in Boston.

It was a close fight, and the able student with his name often written Ratner would have caused him more trouble than he had.

The St. Paul marvel was unable to do much effective work with his right as a result of Ratner's clutch. The New York fighter kept his left shoulder high in the air. It proved a perfect protection against a smashing right hand work. When Malone's right hand came in, Ratner's left hand was always there to stop it.

RATNER HAD BEST OF THE FIGHTING. Malone's record against the ring was 10-1-1. He dropped his only fight in the way of the fight. He was a good fighter, but he was not a great one. He was a good fighter, but he was not a great one.

MCFAYDEN OUT FOR NEW GLORY AS PITCHER

By FRED C. LANE.

In Danny McFayden, pitching as of the school boys, to repeat his performance of last year? Will the seventeen-year-old hurler put a new shine on his old program this season that made him shine so brightly last year?

Those are the questions that baseball lovers and veteran coaches are asking each other. Some will answer in the negative, and more in the affirmative.

McFayden, should you fail to remember, was the best schoolboy pitcher in New England. This is a brief statement to make, yet true.

It was mainly through his ability as a pitcher and the careful guidance of Coach Ayer that McFayden won the championship. McFayden took the mound to be the one in the line of a strike-out record.

He worked on all batters alike and, as a result, established a strike-out record for the season that will stand for some years to come.

McFayden did not allow his team-mates to assist him in winning for he was too good a pitcher to be helped.

At the close of the season he was named as the best pitcher in the state. He was a good pitcher, but he was not a great one.

He was a good pitcher, but he was not a great one. He was a good pitcher, but he was not a great one.

PREDICTS ARTIFICIAL WORLD FOOD SUPPLY

Washington, April 24.—Artificial production of the world's food supply, emancipating man from absolute dependence on the soil and eliminating the dangers of famine and overproduction, was predicted before the convention of the American Chemical Society here by Dr. Carl L. Alberty, director of the food research institute of the American Chemical Society.

Dr. Alberty said that the three groups of foodstuffs—carbohydrates, fats and amino acids—could be produced in a synthetic manner.

BRAVES OUT TO MAKE IT TWO STRAIGHT OVER THE PHILS

PITCHERS IN SHAPE TO WIN

By NICK FLATLEY
Pitching will keep any ball club in a race, according to the book, so it looks as if the Braves would be up there, if their pitchers can go along as they have started. The Braves, after the most brilliant of home openings, still have the Phillies here to work on, and still have their veteran pitchers to use.

McNamara, Marquard and Barnes will go in there in that order, and the Braves certainly will get some work at least two of them. For the Braves have been going along splendidly, and it has been the luck of the game, not the fault of the pitcher, that the Phillies have been able to get a few runs.

McNamara, Marquard and Barnes have done some extra fine pitching and the team hasn't been bothered a bit by the loss of Conner, who is now patrolling a mighty mean outfield. Before the curtain went up, it looked as if Manager Banfill's pitching would be mostly men's work, but that important base has been covered for speedily, and indications are the pitchers will continue.

The Braves made a mistake at first of fielding on one of the left fielders, but the right fielder, who is now patrolling a mighty mean outfield, will keep the ball out of play, and by the time the Phillies get a few more runs, it will be a work.

The team has only one more game to play, and it will be a hard one to win. The Braves are now in a position to win the pennant, and it will be a hard one to win.

Sport Editorial

FANS DEMAND EARLY GAMES
THE ball fans have had their first taste of tardy baseball, and the club doesn't suit. Seven o'clock supper, angry wives and hungry fans is a combination that does not make for a full ball park.

The Braves' first home game was great in this, that the home team won through the good work of our new manager, but what do it profit a team to gain the pennant and suffer the loss of its female fans?

The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world—in this case the baseball world—and the great national pastime will flourish only when the game does not interfere with the running of the household.

The evenings belong to our mothers, our wives, and our sweethearts, and when anything turns up to disturb their sleep, that something is sure to receive a sudden setback.

The Braves have a fighting club and they need the support of the fans, but late games will not bring that support.

The Red Sox tried out the experiment of playing early baseball and contented crowds was the answer.

Mr. Mathewson, you might also try it—then watch the increased attendance.

We are out for a pair of pennants for Boston this year and we want the women to share in the glory—have them so they will like the game—and not hate it, as the cause of hubby's late homecoming.

Keep up your victories, even if you have to play 20 innings to win, but don't forget about the early getaway.
